

A tale of life with its love and hate, its battle, victory defeat, labor, joy and sorrow, a tale of an unconquerable spirit which caused Wilfred Denvert to return to his home in face of a charge for murder—for the sake of love only.

"The Silver King"

A Paramount-Artcraft Special

All that I remember is that I seemed to faint, and when I awoke he was dead and my revolver was beside him. I must have done it, still—I don't remember.

Then the police came and he fled, leaving a sorrowing wife and weeping kiddies—he fled; fled to America and amassed a fortune in silver—although he couldn't remember.

But in his memory there were faces, dim ghostly faces as those seen by a dreaming man. They were hard, cold faces, and wildly excited faces, and dull brutal faces.

Those faces haunted and followed him till they brought him back. Back to home and wife and kiddies who thought him dead. And back within reach of the police!

What happened? Jail? Vindication? What is the story that the faces told? Can't you come now? See it Saturday, March 8th at the Lyceum Theatre.

"The Silver King" a Paramount Artcraft Special Picture. He ran away from a crime he didn't commit and went to America and got immensely rich in mines. He was "The Silver King." His going, his adventures in the West, his return to face the police for the crime he didn't commit makes one of the most dramatic pictures you can imagine. It is a picture of love, of life, of death, and will touch the deepest chords of our being. See it at the Lyceum, Saturday night, March 8th. Also two reel Mack Sennett Comedy.
